Client Story

Building a better business

A specialist carpentry business approached us for help. Their turnover was strong, but profits were discouragingly low. They felt they were living to work rather than working to live.

We analysed their business finances and operations and benchmarked them against similar businesses in their industry. We then developed an action plan. There weren't any silver bullets. Implementation was going to take time, energy and focus. Our aim was to create the most efficient operation possible.

During the first year, our client's turnover dropped. But profits increased due to their focus on operational and production efficiencies. By the end of the second year, their turnover increased and profits had never been better. Although busier than before, their streamlined business practices enabled them to implement a nine-day fortnight.
